1. What do you need to know about Serbia

▣ Serbian dinars

The currency of Serbia is the dinar (RSD), and it is one of those with a relatively high exchange rate. At the time of writing there were 118 dinars to the euro, so expect to be taking out thousands and thousands of notes from ATMs. Cash machines are all over the city too, and there is little benefit to avoiding them in favour of using exchange shops. Change isn't in abundance, so expect curt looks if you try to pay for one beer with a 5,000RSD note.

▣ The Cyrillic alphabet

Serbia is a nation of two alphabets, so don't be surprised to see road signs and menus in both latin and Cyrillic script. The latter of the two isn't as difficult as it seems, and the phonetic nature of the Serbian language makes reading it remarkably easy. Do a little bit of reading on your flight in order to decipher words like пиво (pivo, or beer) and ресторан (restoran, or restaurant). Like most European nations, English is widely spoken in the cities but less so in the villages.

▣ Serbian language

Serbian is a Slavic language, so anyone with a passing knowledge of Russian, Polish, Czech, among others, might notice a few similarities uttered on the streets of Belgrade, Niš, Kragujevac and the rest.

▣ Eat and drink local

Serbia's economy had a tough time during the tumultuous 90s and the country was flooded with imports from the rest of Europe. Serbian companies have begun to fight back, with impressive results in the food and drink sectors. The country has an impressive number of independent breweries and cafes, not to mention a commitment to national cuisine that the fare deserves. Local goods are often much cheaper than the imported ones, too, so you are not only helping the local economy but doing yourself a favour in the process.

▣ The nature is stunning

Belgrade is one of the continent's most famous cities, and Novi Sad is quickly making itself stand out as an up-and-coming destination. This is all common knowledge, but the incredible nature in Serbia less coverage. The nation is home to spectacular valleys, rivers, mountains, gorges and more, including a set of rock formations.

▣ The war is over, and has been for a long time

It is difficult to criticize people for not having intimate knowledge of every country on the planet, but believing that there is still a war ongoing in Serbia is a little too ignorant. NATO's bombing campaign ended in 1999, as the Yugoslav Wars came to an end a few years earlier. Evidence of destruction is still seen here and there, but the nation hasn't been a 'dangerous' place for a very long time.

▣ Smoking is allowed

It can often feel that smoking isn't just allowed in Serbia, it might even be mandatory. The overwhelming majority of folk seem to be willfully puffing away on cigarettes, and bars and cafes in particular can sometimes become hazardous for those sensitive to the smoke. More and more cafes are popping up in Belgrade where smoking is not allowed, but these are still rarities. Smokers will be in paradise but be prepared for your clothes to be a little smelly after a night out.
